6. A. Energy Efficient Lighting Replacements

[Action Item]

DPW Superintendent Mike Kyser has been working with Consumers Energy to take advantage of incentives for the replacement of interior and exterior lighting at several of our buildings. The installation of more efficient fixtures will reduce our annual operating expenses, as a result of a reduced electrical bill. The replacement fixtures include both LED fixtures and more efficient T8 fluorescent fixtures. Fixtures would be replaced at the Police Department, Fire Department Meeting Room and Truck Bay, and the Department of Public Works. The costs, incentives, and anticipated energy savings are detailed in the attached spreadsheet. In short, replacements would cost the Village $5,881.07, with a reimbursement by Consumers Energy of $1,758.40, for a net cost to the Village of $4,122.67. Annual energy savings are expected to be just under $2,000 per year with the replacements, for a payback period on our net investment of just over 2 years. Each of the Departments has sufficient funds in their respective budgets to cover these costs, although not originally budgeted for this purpose. It is recommended that the Council approve a budget adjustment to allow for this capital expense while the incentive is available. Staff will be prepared to address specific questions about the fixtures to be replaced and departmental budgets at the meeting. Please refer to the attached spreadsheet.

6. B. Maumee Street Project Payment Request Authorization

[Action Item]

The Michigan Department of Transportation has requested partial payment of the Village share of costs associated with the Maumee Street reconstruction project. The attached invoice has been reviewed by DPW Superintendent Mike Kyser and charges are as expected. I would recommend a motion to authorize partial project payment of $7,237.35 to the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality for work completed on the project. Please refer to the attached invoice.

6. C. Reschedule July Council Meeting

[Action Item]

It is necessary to reschedule the July Council Meeting. In reviewing schedules with President Snow, we would propose July 8th at 6:30 p.m. Hopefully that date will work with your schedules. A motion is necessary to reschedule the July 16th regular meeting.

6. D. Schedule Public Hearing – Ordinance 209, Amend Water Cross Connection Ordinance and Repeal Begging Ordinance

[Action Item]

Ordinance 209 represents a couple of housekeeping amendments. The Village is mandated by the State of Michigan to enforce a water cross connection ordinance to prevent potential contamination of the public water supply. When our ordinance was adopted, the program was administered by the Michigan Department of Public Health. It is now administered by the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality. Two sections of the ordinance must be updated to reference MDEQ. Also, you may recall that the Federal Court recently struck down the State law authorizing local begging ordinances. This ordinance amendment would repeal the begging ordinance from the Code of Ordinances. A public hearing is required prior to action on Ordinance 209. I would recommend a motion to schedule that hearing for the July meeting. Please refer to the attached Ordinance 209.

6. E. Proposal 1 – Personal Property Tax Reform [Discussion/Action Item]

You may have received the recent correspondence from the Michigan Municipal League asking that member communities pass a resolution to support Proposal 1, which will appear on the August ballot. If approved by voters, repeal of the personal property tax for those owning property with a true cash value of $80,000 and less would be made permanent and the personal property tax for manufacturing property would be phased out. Given that the Village was active in the “Replace Don’t Erase” campaign, I’d like to encourage some discussion on Council’s interest in being active in support of the proposal.

I believe that this is the best proposal that we will see from the State, but it is not necessarily perfect. It is encouraging that the proposal has broad support, including the major statewide municipal organizations, as well as the business and manufacturing organizations. There is also speculation that failure of the proposal could result in the elimination of the tax without replacement revenue. I have attached a copy of the MML sample resolution for discussion. Action could be considered at either the June meeting or in July. Action on the resolution would require a motion and roll call vote. Please refer to the attached sample resolution.

6. F. Computers, Server, and Website Update [Informational Item]

This agenda item is reserved for discussion of upcoming work that will be needed to address our computer servers, desktop computers, and to review the status of the update to the website.

6. G. Project Updates – Heritage Lane and Rail Trail [Informational Item]

This agenda item is reserved for staff updates on the status of these two projects.

City pushing dog licenses, expected to raise $54K

By Ryan Stanton
ryanstanton@mlive.com

If you own a dog in Ann Arbor and your furry friend isn't licensed through the city clerk's office, you're in violation of a longstanding city ordinance — but you're not alone.

City officials estimate there are thousands just like you.

The city is launching a new effort to convince more residents to get their dogs licensed, a move approved by the City Council last week during budget deliberations.

The council voted 10-0 to direct staff to more actively enforce the dog licensing ordinance, which requires dogs older than 6 months to be licensed.

The added emphasis on licensing is expected to generate $54,000 in new annual revenue — about half of which is intended to support increased dog licensing efforts, and half to help pay for animal control services provided by the Humane Society of Huron Valley.

That includes picking up and housing stray animals, and providing sheltered animals with food, water and necessary medical attention.

Council member Jane Lumm, an independent from the 2nd Ward, made the proposal as a way of generating revenue since the city is being asked to start paying its share for local animal control services through the HSHV.

The city's share hasn't been determined, but estimated costs are being negotiated by the city, county and HSHV.

City Administrator Steve Powers plans to return to the council soon with an agreement between the city and county to provide funding for the HSHV.

30,000 DOGS

The HSHV estimates Ann Arbor is home to about 30,000 dogs, but city officials said only a fraction of them are licensed.

Based on the current licensing revenue, about 2,000 dogs are licensed in Ann Arbor, Powers said.

Having a dog licensed through the city is one of the requirements for using either of the city's two dog parks, which is how many dogs come to be licensed.

In addition to being required under city ordinance and state law, licensing is recognized as one of the important steps a pet owner can take to increase the chances of reunification should a pet become lost, Lumm said.

"It's a good thing," she said. "It's referred to as the 'ticket home' for pets."

If half of all dogs in the city were licensed, Lumm said, the city would generate $120,000 annually based on the current two-year license fee of $16.

Before her amendment to the budget, the city had projected $18,000 in annual revenue from dog licensing for next year, which Lumm said represented about a 7 percent compliance rate.

She believes the city can do better than that. Her amendment establishes an expectation the city will achieve a 30 percent compliance rate in the next year, generating a total of $72,000.

The hope is, through improved education and enforcement, the compliance rate eventually will improve to 50 percent or more.

It's a state law! Can't we do equally as well?

should make residents license their dogs.

"Definitely if they're coming to the dog park and stuff like that," he said,

by the city and they are not sure what's in it for them.

Council Member Christopher Taylor, D-3rd Ward, observed that some useful purposes.

It helps reunite lost pets with their families more quickly, keeping lost pets out of shelters, saving costs to the shelter and to taxpayers and making sure shelter space is available for animals who need it most.

It also ensures vaccination, protecting the health of pets and people, and it raises revenue for animal care and control expenses, she said.

"I am not one for more red tape or more fees," Hilgendorf said. "But it is already state law, and there are clear benefits

Hills, Westland, Livonia and Warren — pay about $232,600 annually for animal control services. The average animal "save rate" in those communities is 38 percent, compared with 87 percent in Ann Arbor.

Instead of a government-run animal control facility with a high kill rate, Ann Arbor has an award-winning shelter with the highest save rate in Michigan, Hilgendorf said.

"Because we are a not-for-profit, we can keep costs down while keeping productivity and performance high," she said. "We treat formerly homeless and abused animals like members of our own family. That is what everyone wants out of an animal care center these days. But we can't keep providing these services without payment."

HSHV's donors should not be subsidizing services that ought to be paid by the municipalities, Hilgendorf said.

The City Council has recognized HSHV provides support services for stray dog rescues, quarantines, cruelty investigations and other animal care and control services used by city residents. The city does not have a dedicated animal control officer, although it used to have two, Police Chief John Seto year, generating a total of $72,000.

The hope is, through improved education and enforcement, the compliance rate eventually will improve to 50 percent or more.

Powers said the city is aware of some concerns in the community about dogs being off leash in public and that could be one opportunity for the city to step in to raise awareness about the need to get dogs licensed.

That might be accomplished by something similar to the approach the police department has taken to increase awareness about local traffic laws through targeted enforcement, he said.

Council Member Sally Hart Petersen, D-2nd Ward, noted there also has been talk of a citywide "dog census" to increase compliance.

That's actually a statutory requirement and one tool the city will consider, Powers said.

"Some communities will use temporary seasonal employees going door to door," he said. "It's not common, but it is a requirement."

Ann Arbor resident Brian Thompson, who owns a 10-month-old border collie mix named Athena, agreed the city should make residents license their dogs.

"Definitely if they're coming to the dog park and stuff like that," he said, "because that way you know that the dog has had its shots and everything."

Thompson, who regularly takes his dog to the Swift Run Dog Park, said he doesn't mind paying the licensing fee. Athena has a license that's good through June 2015, and she has a fire-hydrant-shaped tag on her collar to prove it.

Tobey Tait said, if the city is launching an expanded licensing effort, it should allow residents the convenience of handling it online.

"It's just easier, more convenient," she said. "You can do it from home. You don't have to park downtown."

Tait said she keeps Bentley, her 6-year-old "whooodle" (wheaten terrier/poodle mix), licensed through the city, but it would be nice not to have to go to city hall.

Residents with unlicensed dogs who spoke with The Ann Arbor News on Wednesday declined to give their names but said they generally are apprehensive about what they perceive to be a crackdown by the city and they are not sure what's in it for them.

Council Member Christopher Taylor, D-3rd Ward, observed that some council members, including Lum, recently said they didn't want to waste police resources cracking down on people for smoking in public areas, but now there's talk about expanded police enforcement of dog licensing.

Lum said it's a national best practice, and in communities where dog licensing compliance improved, there also has been a reduction in dog bites.

Council Member Sabra Briere, D-1st Ward, said a 30 percent compliance rate seems ambitious to her.

"I'm not confident that people who are not now licensing their dogs are going to suddenly comply because we ask them to," she said.

HUMANE SOCIETY WEIGHS IN

Tanya Hilgendorf, HSHV executive director, said dog licensing — aside from being state law — serves raises revenue for animal care and control expenses, she said.

"I am not one for more red tape or more fees," Hilgendorf said. "But it is already state law, and there are clear benefits for animal welfare, human health and safety and potential tax savings."

Ann Arbor has been asked by the county to pay for at least a part of the city's share of local animal control services.

"They have never paid in the decades that HSHV has been providing contracted mandated services to the county," Hilgendorf said.

About 23 percent of the mandated animal control services provided to Washtenaw County are used by Ann Arbor, Hilgendorf said.

"Yet, they have never paid a dime toward the contract," she said. "Now that they are being asked to pay, they need to think more about potential revenue sources."

Hilgendorf noted four other communities in southeast Michigan with an average population of 101,000 — Farmington dog rescues, quarantines, cruelty investigations and other animal care and control services used by city residents. The city does not have a dedicated animal control officer, although it used to have two, Police Chief John Seto said.

Council Member Stephen Kunselman, D-3rd Ward, said there have been serious issues with loose dogs in one of the neighborhoods in his ward, so there are animal control problems that need to be addressed.

In addition to the increased revenue from dog licensing, the City Council voted unanimously last week to put an extra $75,000 toward animal control services in the new city budget, some of which is intended for deer population control.

City staff must return to council in the next year with a revised fee proposal to reflect the full cost of dog licensing, enforcement and related animal control services.

Hilgendorf said the HSHV's potential involvement in a city program to increase dog licensing is unclear at this time.

Council goes late into night before adopting budget

By Ryan Stanton
ryanstanton@mlive.com

The Ann Arbor City Council approved a $334 million budget for the upcoming fiscal year shortly before 2:30 a.m. Tuesday — toward the end of a meeting that lasted more than seven and a half hours and included extensive debate.

The council made a handful of tweaks to the budget originally put forward by City Administrator Steve Powers, while rejecting most of the major budget amendments offered by various council members, including those dealing with police staffing, public art, fall leaf pickup and human services funding.

As for the items approved, the council voted:

- 6-5 to eliminate funding for a corridor study on Ellsworth Road in favor of putting $125,000 toward programs to further the city's Climate Action Plan.

- 7-3 to remove a $300,000 demolition of the city-owned 415 W. Washington St. property from the budget.

- 9-1 in favor of a one-time use of fund balance from the major and local streets funds to put an extra $180,710 toward alternative transportation.

- 10-0 to direct city staff to more actively enforce the city's dog-licensing ordinance, a move expected to generate $54,000 in new revenue, part of which would go to the Humane Society of Huron Valley for animal services.

Other than those changes, the budget is as the administrator presented it last month, including an extra $1 million to tackle a tree maintenance backlog. The council ultimately put $95,000 toward drug treatment and prevention. Margie Teall was the only other council member to support that proposal.

Warpehoski referenced ongoing concerns about heroin use in the community and said the solution is treatment, not more police.

An attempt to restore bulk leaf collection and holiday tree pickup services was defeated in a 7-4 vote. Anglin, Eaton, Kailasapathy and Lumm were unable to convince their peers it was worth taking $406,000 from the solid waste fund's cash reserves for one-time capital costs, plus $319,500 in recurring annual expenses.

Hieftje argued it was problematic when residents used to rake leaves into the street for bulk collection in the fall. For the past four years, residents have been asked to instead mulch their leaves, set paper bags and compost carts with leaves at the curb for weekly pickup, or take advantage of bulk leaf drop-off locations.

Attempts to reduce funding for economic development group Ann Arbor SPARK also were defeated.

Eaton and Kailasapathy proposed eliminating the general fund's annual $75,000 contribution to SPARK and instead using the money for human services.

After a lengthy debate, Kunselman talked them into leaving the SPARK allocation at $50,000 while redirecting $25,000 to human services, but that was still defeated in a 6-5 vote. It had support from Anglin, Eaton, Kailasapathy, Kunselman and Lumm.

The same five council next winter. The idea had support from Briere, Kailasapathy, Lumm, Sally Hart Petersen and Warpehoski.

The city and county are meeting with other community partners to develop a plan for winter shelter services before next winter arrives, and there's a belief among some that there's a need for additional warming center capacity beyond what the Delonis Center provides.

A proposal to put $152,320 toward supporting the city's new Pedestrian Safety and Access Task Force was defeated in a 5-5 tie vote after Hieftje left. It had support from Briere, Petersen, Taylor, Teall and Warpehoski.

Anglin, Eaton, Kailasapathy and Lumm tried unsuccessfully to reduce transitional administrative costs for the city's public art program from $80,000 to $40,000. They hoped to put an extra $40,000 toward neighborhood traffic calming projects, but they were on the losing side of a 6-4 vote, which came after Hieftje left.

Eaton, Kailasapathy and Lumm also were on the losing end of an 8-3 vote in which the council decided not to direct the city administrator to report back by the end of the year with a plan for restructuring the city's pension plan to reduce costs ing most of the major budget amendments offered by various council members, including those dealing with police staffing, public art, fall leaf pickup and human services funding.

As for the items approved, the council voted:

■ 6-5 to eliminate funding for a corridor study on Ellsworth Road in favor of putting $125,000 toward programs to further the city's Climate Action Plan.

■ 7-3 to remove a $300,000 demolition of the city-owned 415 W. Washington St. property from the budget.

■ 9-1 in favor of a one-time use of fund balance from the major and local streets funds to put an extra $180,710 toward alternative transportation.

■ 10-0 to direct city staff to more actively enforce the city's dog-licensing ordinance, a move expected to generate $54,000 in new revenue, part of which would go to the Humane Society of Huron Valley for animal services.

Other than those changes, the budget is as the administrator presented it last month, including an extra $1 million to tackle a tree maintenance backlog.

The council ultimately stayed with the administrator's recommendation to increase police staffing by three officers, including one assigned to traffic control and two assigned to community engagement, including downtown foot patrols.

The council voted 7-4 against a proposal that would have increased police staffing by five officers — two more than the administrator proposed.

Council Members Mike Anglin, Jack Eaton, Sumi Kailasapathy and Jane Lumm supported adding the extra two officers at a cost of $168,208.

The council also voted 9-2 against a proposal from Council Member Chuck Warpehoski, who wanted to reduce the number of new police officers from three to two and instead were unable to convince their peers it was worth taking $406,000 from the solid waste fund's cash reserves for one-time capital costs, plus $319,500 in recurring annual expenses.

Hieftje argued it was problematic when residents used to rake leaves into the street for bulk collection in the fall. For the past four years, residents have been asked to instead mulch their leaves, set paper bags and compost carts with leaves at the curb for weekly pickup, or take advantage of bulk leaf drop-off locations.

Attempts to reduce funding for economic development group Ann Arbor SPARK also were defeated.

Eaton and Kailasapathy proposed eliminating the general fund's annual $75,000 contribution to SPARK and instead using the money for human services.

After a lengthy debate, Kunselman talked them into leaving the SPARK allocation at $50,000 while redirecting $25,000 to human services, but that was still defeated in a 6-5 vote. It had support from Anglin, Eaton, Kailasapathy, Kunselman and Lumm.

The same five council members were on the losing end of another 6-5 vote against decreasing the Local Development Finance Authority's budget by $165,000.

Council Member Sabra Briere's proposal to expand curbside compost collection year-round was defeated in a 7-3 vote, with only Christopher Taylor and Teall joining in support. Hieftje had left the meeting by the time the vote was taken.

Adding weekly compost collection from December through March would have cost an extra $300,000 annually.

The council voted 6-5 against using $100,000 from the city's affordable housing fund to provide assistance for a warming center for the homeless $152,320 toward supporting the city's new Pedestrian Safety and Access Task Force was defeated in a 5-5 tie vote after Hieftje left. It had support from Briere, Petersen, Taylor, Teall and Warpehoski.

OPERATION & MAINTENANCE

The plant was in compliance with the NPDES permit limitations during the month of May 2014.

Lagoon systems around the county completed the spring discharge this month. The Jonesville lab performed analysis for seven lagoons systems this spring. Invoices totaling $4,955.00 were prepared and submitted to Village Hall. Keith and Brian did a great job of keeping all the records straight and organized.

The new trickling filter motor was received and installed on the north filter. The motor was replaced under warranty. The sidewalls and distribution mechanism were power washed.

The Vector was used to clean the raw wastewater wet well. This is done annually due to grease build up in the wet well. The Vector was also used to clean the back wash storage tank. This is also done annually. The Vector was repaired several times during these projects.

The 2013 Consumer Confidence Report was delivered to the local Health Department and the Certification was mailed to the MDEQ as required. Plant Staff also met with the MDEQ to cover some new water regulations.

PLANT EFFICIENCY—May 2014

5-Day Biochemical Oxygen Demand

NPDES Permit Limit in May 2014—4 mg/l Monthly Average

The BOD-5 test tells us how much of the oxygen in the water is being used up or demanded by the waste in the water. High oxygen demand will deplete the oxygen in the receiving water. This will have adverse effects on the quality of life (fish) in the receiving stream.

Jonesville Monthly Average—1.8 mg/l

Average Percent Removal from the Raw Wastewater—98.1%

Total Suspended Solids

NPDES Permit Limit in May 2014—20 mg/l Monthly Average

Suspended solids are very important in controlling the process in the plant. Suspended solids are removed via settling clarifiers and are pumped to the anaerobic digester for treatment. The digested biosolids are applied to farmland at agronomic rates as fertilizer.

Jonesville Monthly Average—1.1 mg/l

Average Percent Removal from the Raw Wastewater—98.6%

Total Phosphorus

NPDES Permit Limit in May 2014—1 mg/l Monthly Average

Phosphorus is a nutrient that promotes growth. In fact, farmers use phosphorus as a fertilizer on crop lands. Phosphorus is found in many cleaning agents and industrial processes. Excessive phosphorus in wastewater promotes the excessive growth of micro and macro-organisms in the receiving stream. In other words, phosphorus promotes excessive growth of algae and seaweed. These plants demand oxygen from the water and tend to decrease the quality of life in the receiving stream.

Jonesville Monthly Average—0.8 mg/l

Average Percent Removal from the Raw Wastewater—76.2%

Ammonia Nitrogen

NPDES Permit Limit in May 2014—0.5 mg/l Monthly Average

Ammonia Nitrogen is the result of bacterial decomposition of organic nitrogen. Examples of organic nitrogen include animal and plant protein, amino acids and urea from urine. Ammonia nitrogen is a very unstable form of nitrogen. In wastewater plants ammonia nitrogen is oxidized to form nitrite nitrogen. Further oxidation of nitrite nitrogen will form the stable compound called nitrate nitrogen. This process is called nitrification and occurs in the trickling filter towers. If nitrification does not occur in the treatment plant, it will occur in the receiving stream once again depriving oxygen from the aquatic population. Because of the sensitive nature of the microorganisms involved in the nitrification process, the ammonia nitrogen limits are about the hardest to hit.

Jonesville Monthly Average—0.291 mg/l

Average Percent Removal from the Raw Wastewater—98.5%

Jonesville Daily Maximum—0.978 mg/l
