Jeff,
I agree that its safe to assume that the other entity did not submit a bid. Accordingly, you may open the Bid submitted. If the Bid is found acceptable, we will want to put the time line and other facts into the record at the counsel meeting in order to be transparent.

John,

Please see Mr. Wingard's information regarding outreach to the second bid holder on our project. What is your opinion? Can we open the bid that was received or do we need to re-bid?

Sorry, but no. We are calling and emailing daily. I think it's safe to say they didn't submit a bid...

Jeff,

Please see the response from the City Attorney, below. Would you please attempt a final telephone contact with the second company that requested a bid package to determine if they submitted a bid? Please report the outcome of that contact so that he can advise on next steps.

Thank you,
Jeff

The best approach would be to confirm that the other entity did not submit a bid. So please ask the engineer to try again by telephone to confirm that no bid was sent.
If that is confirmed or if the other entity fails to respond. We are good to proceed with the one bid.

John,

I spoke to Jeff Wingard at Fleis and Vandenbrink about the second bidder for the sewer lining project. His office has attempted several contacts, but has not gotten a response from the second company that requested a bid package. They are not clear why they are not getting a response, but take it to mean that the company does not have a bid that was mailed/shipped but failed to be delivered.

If you clicked on the tracking in the email (below) from the one bid that we did receive, the delivery was to take place on February 8th (the day before the opening). Tracking shows it was delayed, causing it to be received after the bid opening time.

I'd appreciate your opinion of whether we can open the one sealed bid that was received after the opening time, or if we are required to rebid entirely. The single bid remains sealed; we have not opened it.

Jeff,

See below for the Fed Ex receipt for the Insituform bid. It was supposed to be delivered by noon. We have reached out to the other plan holder and have not heard back from them yet.
